1. Instill in all the lower ranks of workers ("hand-to-mouth type of workers") an understanding of Communism. Build up the morale of the workers by propaganda and the inducement of higher wages.
2. Arouse the workers against the unjust administration of the government. Make the workers believe that only Communism can bring justice to the poorer classes.
3. Inspire the laborers with the new idea of the Progressive System (Communism) which has the objective of improving the general standard of living of the workers. Inspire the laborers to adjust the wrongs wrought by the capitalists. Organized meetings should be held, in such varied areas as Yanawa and Chand Lane, to instruct the workers.
4. Point out to the workers the example of the progressive countries that have accepted Communism. Give the workers pertinent information on World Communism.
5. Arouse the laborers to use 1 May as their own May Day. Point out to the laborers how important it is for them to fight for their rights.
6. Older members of the Communist Party must expand their knowledge of Party doctrine and must convince new friends of the desirability of becoming a member of the Party.
7. A refresher course for each member must be held at least three times a month. It is necessary for the members to learn the progressive and general movements of the organization in its internal and external activities.

8. All members must be concerned with helping to spread Communism in both active and passive ways.
9. Security is essential. All members have the responsibility of maintaining strict security.
10. Any member who betrays the Party will receive the severest penalty. Only one punishment is possible, that is, death. It is the duty of everyone to expose a betrayer. The first individual to report a defector will be promoted.
